Boston Where

CONSTANT CRAVINGS

14 satisfying ways to silence that sweet tooth when you must have chocolate!

We know you want it.

America got its first taste of chocolate right here in Boston when John Baker and John Hannon started up a fledgling business in 1765 and called it Baker's. For some of us, chocolate is the essence of our souls. It's an aphrodisiac. It has antioxidants. Heck, it's one of God's foods. And, in this month, when the sweet stuff is especially sought after, we offer 14 ways to satisfy the craving...and then some.

1 Boston's only fine dining establishment where desserts are main entrees, the acclaimed Finale features a signature item designed to fulfill a chocolate lover's wildest dream: the Molten Chocolate. On the menu since the place opened 12 years ago, the petit chocolate cake remains a hot item and is baked to order so that its liquid Valrhona center is as gooey and as great as possible. 1 Columbus Ave., 617.423.3184, www.finale-desserts.com.
